

Time for a change?

80% of parents say that their child's most serious problem in school is a lack of organization.

Educators know that the majority of academic problems stem from a lack of organization rather than from a lack of academic talent.

The U.S. Department of Education feels that the #1 way to assist children with their homework is to help them get organized.

Teachers can show that they value organization by recommending appropriate tools, modeling organization, and providing time regularly for students to stay organized.

Good organizational habits will set students up for success in school and in life.

No matter what your style—neat freak, pigpen, or somewhere in between—everyone benefits from organization.
